

Supplementary Information (SI)

The Epigenetic Changes in a Rat Model of Post-traumatic Stress Disorder Controlled by Valproic Acid

Gökçe Akpınar^{1a}, Sema Ketenci², Gökçe E. Sarıdoğan^{3a}, Banu Aydın⁴, Nurdan Tekin⁵, Hülya Cabadak⁴, M. Zafer Gören^{1*}

Marmara University, School of Medicine, Departments of Medical Pharmacology¹, Biophysics⁴,
Atlas University, School of Medicine, Department of Medical Pharmacology², Turkish Ministry of Health, Erenköy Psychiatry and Neurology Hospital³,
University of Health Sciences, Hamidiye Faculty of Medicine, Department of Medical Pharmacology⁵
Istanbul, Türkiye

^a equally contributed to the work

* Corresponding author:

Prof. M. Zafer Gören, M.D., Ph.D.

e-mail.: mgoren@marmara.edu.tr

Supplementary Figure 1. Uncropped images of all gels and blots. The use of identical membranes facilitated the maintenance of uniform experimental conditions. Membranes were meticulously sectioned and organized to enhance visual clarity and experimental consistency within our study.