

Additional file 2 – Interview guide for health professional

1. Doctors' interview guide

Presentations

You recently spoke to a woman about a self-collection procedure. How did it go?

Did the woman ask any questions?

Did she have any concerns?

What information has been shared?

What do you think of the questionnaire?

Received several? → How did it go?

Had you been informed of the study?

What is the best way to inform professionals?

What could be improved here?

What do you think of self-collection?

What do you think about sending it to women's homes?

Can this help to reach other women?

Which ones?

Who should be offered this format?

Are there still barriers to access? What are they?

What could be improved?

What do you think of the follow-up if the result is positive?

What do you think of the arrangements: is it better to go through a professional or send direct?

Economic incentive?

Do you do smear tests?

What do you think of the new HPV protocol? Do you feel you have received sufficient training on this protocol?

Do you talk to women about screening? What do you tell them? Which women? Systematic?

How do they react? What encourages them to do so?

Are you talking about prevention?

What difficulties do you encounter in discussing intimate/gynaecological health with women? All women or some (social or ethnic background, women with a low level of education, etc.)? Do you think you have enough training to deal with these issues with women who are not from the same origin/culture as you?

What do you think are the barriers to screening?

What can encourage women to go for screening?

2. Chemist interview guide

Presentations

You recently spoke to a woman about a self-collection procedure. How did it go?

Were you informed about the study beforehand?

If so - how did you receive the information?

If not - explain that it was sent by post.

What is the best way to inform professionals?

What could be improved here?

Did the woman ask any questions?

Did she have any concerns?

What information has been shared?

Did you feel comfortable answering these questions?

What additional information would you need?

In what format?

What do you think of the arrangements: is it better to go through a professional or send direct?

Is it part of the chemist's role to take part in the CC screening process / to receive the kits?

What do you think about self-testing?

What do you think about sending it to women's homes?

Can this help you reach other women? Which women?

Who should be offered this format?

Are there still barriers to access? What are they?

What could be improved?

Economic incentive?

Are you familiar with the new HPV screening protocol?

Do you think you've had enough training in this protocol?

Do you talk to your pharmacy about screening?

In which cases?

How do they react?

Are you talking about prevention?

What difficulties do you encounter in discussing intimate/gynaecological health with women? All women or some (social or ethnic background, women with a low level of education, etc.)?

Do you think you have enough training to deal with these issues with women who are not of the same origin/culture as you?

What do you think are the barriers to screening?

What can encourage women to go for screening?