

Highlights

- Interpenetrating phase architectures break the stiffness–damping trade-off.
- Extraordinary damping values up to 18% are feasible upon appropriate IPC designs.
- Shear amplification in the compliant phase controls energy dissipation.
- Damping scales nonlinearly with internal soft phase shear.